Audrey's teaching style and training is generally known worldwide as the School of Love.

Audrey's training is loved by working parents and educators around the world. Frequently invited to speak in internationally arena on areas to bring out the inner strength and development of resilience in the child.

Having spent more than 20 years in the corporate arena, flocking with the elites and the High Flyers. Her turning point came when she encountered three suicide cases where it sparked Audrey to see beyond Wealth and Material needs and seek the answer to question of "What a Child truly needs? And what adult as parents can provide for them"

With more than 15 years of training experience in Waldorf early childhood education and guided children with special needs. Audrey has applied her unique Waldrof-Approach to train many parents, child and educator to look deep into the current educational challenges and provided practical solutions.

Waldorf Education is holistic approach to education based on the philosophy of Rudolf Steiner, emphasizing the development of intellectual, artistic, and practical skills, with a focus beyond imagination and creativity. It is aimed to nurture the whole child, addressing their cognitive, emotional and physical needs.

What they says about her

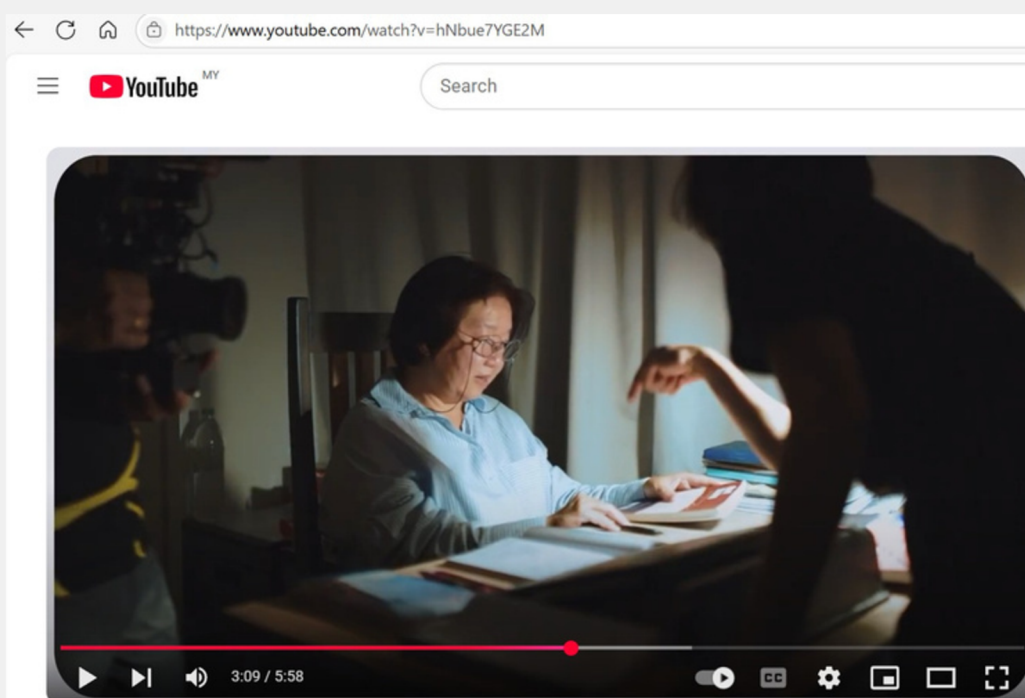

"Hilltop House is about my friend Audrey Chow, who is the principal of a children's school that has adopted a child-friendly approach to education based on the Waldorf system," said Lee Sinje, Malaysian who rocketed to fame in the 2002 thriller The Eye, and has since won multiple film awards such as the Golden Horse for best actress.
